

Welcome To the 2nd Annual Carolina Challenge!

Last year, my family was thrilled with the success of the Carolina Challenge. We found that this one-day event turned into a celebration of the talent our state has within the borders of a hoops crazed region.

This time around, with the help of numerous people, we hope that the experience can rival our initial effort. Through private donations (in many cases unsolicited) we've been able to reduce the cost per player, improve the feel of the gym and create an atmosphere unlike any other in North Carolina.

As I spent the last year traveling around the nation one thing became clear: no other state showcases its players in this type of setting. By blending academics, tidbits on life skills and of course, basketball, we've been able to attract elite players from the state. Our approach this time around was to target less players and strive to bring in the cream of the crop. Through word of mouth and the efforts of many media members in the state and nationally, I'm proud to say that with little exception the talent you see on display today accurately represents the deep pool we had to select from.

Sure, you'll see a lot of stars and in a few select cases, potential McDonald's All-Americans. However, if you dig deeper you'll find that last year's initial graduating class boasted signees from the ACC, Big East, Pac-10, SEC, Conference USA, Colonial, Big South, Southern, Ohio Valley, Atlantic Sun and Patriot leagues.

In attempting to shine the spotlight on our players, we've noticed an increased presence in the state from the Ivy League and other conferences around the nation. In short, in a small way, the Carolina Challenge is opening doors to players from coast to coast. Colleges are looking at the roster of the event and using it as a starting point when piecing together spring recruiting schedules.

It's difficult to incorporate academics, skill work and games into a single day. However, this time around the addition of an academic and recruiting seminar for friends and family members is something we're extremely proud of. We're hoping to stimulate conversation in your ride home not just about basketball but in regards to what it takes to make yourself into a recruitable college athlete.

Thanks for coming out and sharing in this special day!

Best wishes,

Dave, Paige and Michael Telep
